

America's Sharia Panic Challenged in New Satirical Book, Run! Sharia Is Coming, by Director Faizan Syed

New satirical book uses comedy to challenge fear-driven political myths about Sharia, Islam, religious freedom, and the "threat" of Muslim life in America.

DALLAS, TX, UNITED STATES, August 31, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- New book uses satire, political humor, history, and religious literacy to challenge misconceptions about Islam, Sharia, and American Muslims.

Activist, author, and public speaker Director Faizan Syed has released his new satirical book, Run! Sharia Is Coming: Ban Sharia Before Americans Find Out What it Actually Means, a provocative and comedic examination of one of the most misunderstood and politically weaponized words in American politics: Sharia.

Rather than approaching the subject through a dry theological or academic discussion, Syed uses satire, political humor, history, and intentionally exaggerated arguments to confront claims about Islam and Sharia commonly repeated by politicians, preachers, commentators, and everyday Americans.

The premise of the book is simple:

What happens when Americans who have been told for years to fear Sharia actually find out what it means?

Through humorous arguments explaining why America must urgently "ban Sharia," Syed turns the political rhetoric surrounding Islam on its head. The book explores religious freedom, family life, charity, education, women's rights, finance, healthcare, care for neighbors, religious courts, American Muslim identity, and the relationship between Islamic teachings and American society.

"For years, politicians have warned Americans to fear Sharia. I wrote this book because the panic gets a lot less scary and a lot more ridiculous once people actually learn what Sharia means."

Director Faizan Syed

Rather than simply responding to rhetoric against Sharia, the book deliberately adopts its language, exaggerates it, and then uses comedy to expose contradictions behind many of the claims made about Muslims.

Readers are repeatedly invited to compare sensational political warnings about Sharia with what Islamic teachings actually say and, just as importantly, to examine contradictions within American history, political, religious, and cultural debates.

For years, politicians have warned Americans to fear Sharia. The manufactured panic gets a lot less scary and a lot more ridiculous when people can laugh and learn what Sharia actually means.”

Director Faizan Syed

Syed describes the project as more than a book about Islam. It is also a satire about fear, misinformation, political distraction, religious hypocrisy, and what happens when people develop strong opinions about something they have never seriously studied.

The book is designed not only for Muslim readers, but also for neighbors, coworkers, students, educators, interfaith audiences, political junkies, conservatives, liberals, skeptics, and anyone who has ever heard someone warn that “Sharia is coming.”

At its core, Run! Sharia Is Coming challenges readers to do something increasingly rare in American political discourse: laugh, question their assumptions, and learn something before deciding what they fear.

Syed has also developed comedic videos and stand up routine based on themes from the book.
