

Akribis Veins & Vitality Expands Non-Surgical Facial Rejuvenation Options for Patients Seeking Natural-Looking Results

Worthington practice offers RF microneedling, Emface, Exion and Carboxy treatments designed to support skin firmness, tone and definition without surgery.

WORTHINGTON, OH, UNITED STATES, September 2, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Akribis Veins & Vitality, a medical aesthetics and vein care practice serving central Ohio, is highlighting its range of non-surgical facial rejuvenation treatments designed to address skin firmness, tone, texture and facial definition.

Our approach to facial vitality is about understanding each patient's goals and creating a plan that supports the skin's health while enhancing the features that make them unique.”

Dr. Amanda Cooper

The practice's facial vitality treatments are built around supporting the skin's natural ability to look smoother, tighter and more radiant, according to the practice. Rather than altering a patient's appearance, the treatments are intended to enhance existing features.

Facial vitality, as defined by the practice, involves several factors, including skin firmness and elasticity, facial contour and definition, skin tone and texture, collagen support, and overall radiance. Sun exposure, stress, lifestyle and the natural aging process can affect collagen production over time, which may contribute to uneven texture, dullness, fine lines or loss of firmness, the practice said.

To address these concerns, Akribis Veins & Vitality offers several non-surgical treatment options, including:

RF Microneedling, which combines microchannels with radiofrequency energy to encourage collagen remodeling and may help improve skin texture, fine lines, mild laxity and overall smoothness.

Emface, a technology designed to support facial muscle tone while also improving skin appearance, offered as a non-surgical option for enhancing facial definition without significant downtime.

Exion and Carboxy treatments, which target specific skin quality concerns through different mechanisms with the shared goal of supporting healthier-looking, more youthful skin.

"Looking your best does not mean looking like someone else," said Dr. Amanda Cooper of Akribis Veins & Vitality. "Our approach to facial vitality is about understanding each patient's goals and creating a plan that supports the skin's health while enhancing the features that make them unique."

The practice said personalized consultations, during which a provider evaluates a patient's concerns and desired outcomes, are central to determining which treatments align with individual goals.

Patients interested in facial vitality treatments can schedule a consultation through the practice's website or by contacting the office directly.
