

Ballot Bliss's New Partner Program Addresses the Hidden Cost of Scaling Community Elections

Ballot Bliss officially launched its new Preferred Partner Program (PPP) designed to help community management companies scale elections without surprise costs.

NASHUA, NH, UNITED STATES, September 1, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Surprise election fees

mid-cycle put community managers and election inspectors in a difficult spot with their boards. Ballot Bliss's new Preferred Partnership Program ends that, with portfolio-level features and wholesale pricing.

Online voting platform Ballot Bliss has officially launched its new Preferred Partner Program (PPP), designed to help community association management companies and inspectors of elections scale their operations without increasing headcount. The program replaces the surprise add-on costs with transparent pricing.

The Hidden Costs of Scaling Digital HOA & Condo

Elections:

As more management companies turn to digital platforms to handle elections, the challenge isn't just running one election. It's managing dozens of elections at the same time with limited staff in a tight hiring market, as association budgets tighten under rising insurance and vendor costs. When unexpected charges appear from generic voting software vendors in the middle of an election for voter reminders or phone support, managers are forced to go back to their boards for extra funds, straining the trust they worked hard to build.

How the Preferred Partner Program Works:

Ballot Bliss's new Preferred Partner Program brings all voting operations under a single system; no more juggling logins community by community. As a partner of the program, management companies get access to portfolio level features at wholesale pricing that saves them up to 41% annually. Built for the way that management companies and inspectors of elections actually work, the Program offers:

- A way to scale without the extra headcount - One platform runs every community's elections, so staff can manage hundreds of them without added stress.
- Unlimited manager access - No per-seat caps; each manager sees only their own communities.
- Portfolio dashboard - Participation, vote type, and restrictions for every community, at a glance.
- Flexible setup - Launch ballots yourself in minutes, or hand off ballot building, voter outreach, and pre-launch ballot inspection to the Ballot Bliss team.
- Predictable pricing, no surprise mid-cycle fees - The program gives managers and inspectors one predictable pricing, helping them build stronger board relationships.

Predictable Pricing, Stronger Board Relationships:

"Election season tends to be one of the biggest challenges for management companies, not only because the work is tedious, but because unexpected bills put them in a tough spot with boards," says Ashish Patel, CEO & Founder of Ballot Bliss. "Our Preferred Partner Program addresses that challenge with a process that's predictable both financially and operationally. We're giving managers and election inspectors the tools to grow their portfolio." Additionally, when freed from the surprise fees, managers and inspectors can redirect that energy toward voter outreach and board relationships. That often makes the difference between quorum on the first try and a costly redo.

The program is already paying off for partners like Dirigo Management Company. "Ballot Bliss gave us the ability to offer elections as a value-added service — and actually make money doing it. The savings on the platform go straight to our bottom line." says Bob Keegan, President and CEO of Dirigo.

Management companies and inspectors of elections ready to streamline voting processes across their portfolio can email sales@ballotbliss.com for a free consultation on how the program benefits them or visit ballotbliss.com to learn more.
