intelligence platform. Now in its seventh year, the 2026 ranking evaluated more than 5,000 eligible addiction treatment centers nationwide and recognized 440 facilities.

The rankings consider several measures, including recommendations and evaluations from addiction treatment professionals, facility credentials and accreditations reported through the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), available care services, and patient experience data.

For Banyan, having facilities recognized across multiple states reflects a broader commitment to providing a consistent standard of care throughout the organization.

“We at Banyan hold ourselves to the highest standard of care and quality. Our commitment every day is to create an environment where our clients are respected and supported in their path to recovery and healing,” said John Sory, CEO of Banyan Treatment Centers. “It is always an honor for sites to be recognized. I’m proud of our team who are dedicated every day to helping change lives.”

While each of the six recognized facilities serves a different community, they share a commitment to providing individualized, evidence-informed care for people affected by substance use disorders. The recognition also reflects the work of the clinicians, nurses, behavioral health professionals, case managers, support staff, and other team members who contribute to the treatment experience each day.

Newsweek and Statista’s rankings are designed to provide an additional resource for individuals and families evaluating residential addiction treatment options. For the 2026 rankings, eligible facilities were required to provide inpatient or residential addiction treatment for long-term periods of 30 days or more.
