

Achievable Partners with Association of Classical Christian Schools to Expand Access to CLT, SAT, and ACT Test Prep

SAN FRANCISCO, CA, UNITED STATES, August 31, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Achievable, a modern test preparation company focused on helping students succeed on high-stakes exams, today announced a new partnership with the Association of Classical Christian Schools \(ACCS\), the largest and most widely recognized association serving classical Christian schools.

Through the partnership, Achievable will make its CLT, SAT, and ACT preparation courses available to ACCS member schools, giving students access to comprehensive, self-guided test preparation while providing schools with tools to monitor student progress and readiness.

Of particular relevance to ACCS schools is Achievable's CLT preparation course. The course was developed in partnership with Clayborne Education, an official test preparation provider of the Classic Learning Test and a team with decades of combined experience preparing students for college admissions exams.

The CLT is especially well aligned with classical Christian education because of its emphasis on verbal and quantitative reasoning, the classical liberal arts tradition, and engagement with significant works from the Western intellectual tradition. ACCS President David Goodwin, who also serves on the CLT Board of Academic Advisors, has previously described the emergence of the CLT as "a refreshing new direction" in college entrance testing.

"We're excited to welcome Achievable as an ACCS partner and to connect our member schools with another high-quality resource for college admissions test preparation," said Gene Liechty, Director of Advancement and Partners at ACCS. "Achievable's focus on the CLT, along with its SAT and ACT offerings, gives our schools and families additional tools to help students prepare confidently and effectively for the next step in their education."

"ACCS schools are an exceptional fit for what we're building at Achievable," said Tyler York, CEO of Achievable. "These schools care deeply about developing students who can read carefully, reason clearly, and engage seriously with important ideas. The CLT reflects many of those same priorities, and we're proud to offer ACCS students a preparation course developed with Clayborne Education, one of the organizations that knows this exam best."

Achievable's online courses are designed to guide students through the entire preparation process independently. The platform combines expert-written instruction, realistic practice questions and exams, adaptive learning technology, personalized study plans, and AI-powered tutoring to identify weaknesses and help students focus their study time where it will have the greatest impact.

For ACCS member schools, Achievable also provides organization management tools that allow educators and administrators to track student activity, progress, performance, and readiness from a central dashboard. This gives schools greater visibility into how students are preparing while allowing individual learners to work through the program at their own pace.

The partnership expands Achievable's growing support for classical, Christian, and homeschool communities. Achievable has also partnered with organizations, including Homeschool New York / LEAH and Texas Home Educators, to broaden access to high-quality CLT, SAT, and ACT preparation.

"We want schools to have access to excellent test preparation without having to build an entire program internally," York said. "Our goal is to give educators confidence that their students have a clear path from the beginning of their studies through test day, while giving students the tools they need to prepare effectively on their own."
