Tomo Marjanovic

Aspire Rejuvenation was founded by Tomo Marjanovic, who spent more than 12 years in law enforcement in Ohio and Florida before retiring in October 2018 with the Public Safety Medal of Valor. He founded Aspire Rejuvenation the following year, building it into a family-held, bootstrapped organization offering hormone replacement therapy, peptide therapy, medical weight management, sexual health and regenerative medicine under licensed clinical oversight. The Heroes Program extends that background directly to the population Marjanovic served alongside for more than a decade.

Aspire's approach centers on lab work before treatment. Patients start with comprehensive testing, not a prescription pad, a model Marjanovic built after his own hormone levels crashed on night shift and went undiagnosed inside the system he worked in at the time. Veterans and first responders are frequent arrivals at Aspire's clinics, often already carrying a long list of prescriptions without a clear answer for how they feel.

Aspire Rejuvenation continues to grow its hormone optimization and rejuvenation services, with the Heroes Program standing as an ongoing part of how it reduces the cost of care for the people it was built to serve. Moon
