has earned Verified Agent status on Agent Review, a platform dedicated to improving consumer insurance education, protecting consumers and strengthening the credibility of qualified insurance professionals. Cutler is a licensed insurance agent and long-term-care insurance solutions specialist with ACSIA Partners LLC. He specializes in helping individuals, couples, executives, employers and worksite groups prepare for future long-term-care needs. "I am proud to earn Verified Agent status and become part of what Agent Review is building," Cutler said. "Consumers need a trusted resource where they can learn about insurance, evaluate their options and connect with experienced agents whose identities and professional credentials have been independently verified. That trust must work both ways. Just as consumers deserve to know who they are working with, agents need confidence in the identities of the consumers, professionals and organizations they engage with. Strong verification helps create a safer, more transparent relationship for everyone involved."

Consumers routinely share sensitive financial, health and personal information with insurance professionals. Before beginning that relationship, they deserve greater confidence that the person they are communicating with is who they claim to be and possesses the professional credentials represented to the public. This need has become increasingly important as artificial intelligence makes it easier to create convincing fake identities, altered photographs, fabricated credentials, cloned voices and deepfake videos. A professional-looking website, social-media profile or video call can no longer be treated as sufficient proof of identity or legitimacy.

Independent verification provides an additional layer of protection by helping consumers distinguish qualified insurance professionals from unverified individuals, misleading online profiles and increasingly sophisticated forms of digital impersonation. Verification is also important for agents. Licensed insurance professionals spend years developing their knowledge, maintaining their licenses and building their reputations and client relationships. Verified Agent status helps them demonstrate that their identities and professional information have been reviewed by an independent third party. It also gives qualified agents a meaningful way to distinguish themselves in a crowded and often confusing online marketplace.

Agent Review does not treat verification as a one-time badge or permanent marketing designation. Verified Agent status is supported by a recurring monthly third-party review designed to confirm that key professional information remains current and that the agent continues to satisfy the platform’s verification requirements. This ongoing monitoring gives consumers greater confidence that they are viewing current information rather than relying on credentials that were checked only when a profile was originally created. For agents, the monthly review reinforces credibility by demonstrating a continuing commitment to transparency and professional accountability. “Most consumers begin their insurance research online and are often overwhelmed by the volume of websites and information suggesting that insurance decisions are simple,” said Jonas Roeser, CEO and Co-Founder of Agent Review. “Artificial intelligence has made it even more difficult for consumers to determine whether an online identity, photograph, voice or video is authentic. Agent Review helps address that challenge by combining consumer education with recurring independent verification of the professionals using the platform.” Agent

Review brings the familiar third-party review and verification model used in other industries to the insurance marketplace. The platform helps consumers develop a basic understanding of insurance products and connect with qualified agents who can provide personalized guidance. Consumers can evaluate insurance professionals based on criteria including location, states served, areas of expertise, professional credentials, insurance licenses, carrier appointments, performance ratings, languages spoken, client testimonials, military service and charitable or community involvement.

Consumers can also share reviews and ratings based on their experiences, providing additional information to help future clients make more informed decisions. For qualified agents, verification can help establish trust before the first client conversation, strengthen credibility in search results and digital communications, provide reassurance to consumers concerned about fraud and impersonation, and demonstrate that the agent's identity and professional information have been independently reviewed. Verified status does not replace a consumer's responsibility to evaluate an insurance professional or confirm applicable licensing. Instead, it gives consumers another independent source of information to support that evaluation. By combining professional verification, monthly monitoring, video identity confirmation, consumer education and public reviews, Agent Review is designed to support a more transparent and trustworthy insurance marketplace. Cutler helps clients evaluate strategies for protecting their savings, preserving their independence and determining how and where they would prefer to receive care. His work includes traditional long-term-care insurance, workplace solutions, tax-qualified and state partnership plans where available, and other approaches designed to address future care expenses. Through ACSIA Partners LLC, Cutler provides access to long-term-care and related insurance solutions from multiple carriers. He serves clients in New York and is licensed in numerous additional states.

About Agent Review

Agent Review is built around three core consumer principles: Education, Search and Assessment. The platform provides unbiased educational information for consumers researching insurance products, comprehensive search capabilities for finding insurance professionals and assessment tools through which consumers can rate and review their experiences. For insurance agents, the platform's central value propositions are Visibility and Credibility.
