

AgelessRx Publishes Results From 90-Day XPRIZE Healthspan Longevity Trial

AgelessRx publishes results from its 90-day XPRIZE Healthspan pilot study, reporting promising signals across several healthy aging measures.

ANN ARBOR, MI, UNITED STATES, September 2, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- AgelessRx, a leading longevity platform, has published results from its 90-day pilot study conducted as part of the XPRIZE Healthspan competition, reporting preliminary findings across several measures associated with healthy aging.

The randomized controlled trial evaluated a multi-intervention longevity strategy in adults ages 60 to 80 experiencing indicators of age-related functional decline. The study was designed to generate preliminary data across biological age, immune function, muscle health, sleep, cognitive performance, and overall quality of life.

The results helped AgelessRx advance in the global XPRIZE Healthspan competition, which challenges research teams to develop approaches capable of restoring muscle, cognitive, and immune function as people age. AgelessRx has been selected as one of 10 finalists from more than 600 teams worldwide and received a $1 million Milestone 2 award to advance its research.

Full details of the study design, findings, and safety data are available in the published results linked above.

The pilot findings do not establish efficacy for any individual intervention or combination of interventions, and individual outcomes may vary.
