

New Business Owners Unknowingly Expose Home Addresses When Forming an LLC, Opus Virtual Offices Finds

Filing an LLC makes an address public record. Use code ADDRESS100 to waive the $100 setup fee and keep yours private.

Most entrepreneurs don't think about their address until it's public record. By then, it's too late to take it back. Getting it right from day one protects your privacy and your image.”

Yori Galel, CEO, Opus Virtual Offices

a leading provider of virtual office solutions with 650-plus locations across the United States, today addressed one of the most overlooked decisions new business owners face: which address to list when forming an LLC. For a limited time, entrepreneurs can use promo code ADDRESS100 to waive the $100 setup fee.

The moment an LLC is filed, its listed address enters the public record. Data broker sites routinely scrape state filings and republish that information, and owners who use their home address often see it appear on people-search sites within weeks, typically followed by a rise in unsolicited mail and sales calls.

Credibility takes a hit too. Clients and vendors evaluating a new company for the first time often form an impression from its address alone, and a residential listing can read as less established, regardless of the work behind it. Some HOAs and local zoning rules further restrict operating a business from a residential property, a detail many owners discover only after they've already filed.

A commercial virtual address sidesteps all three issues at once: no home exposure, a more credible first impression, and no zoning conflict, all without the cost of a physical lease.

"Most entrepreneurs don't think about their address until it's already public record," said Yori Galel, CEO of Opus Virtual Offices. "By then, it's too late to take it back. Getting it right from day one protects both your privacy and your professional image."

Opus Virtual Offices gives entrepreneurs a prestigious commercial business address, a live receptionist answering calls in the company's name Monday through Friday, professional mail handling, and a dedicated business phone number, all for $99 a month with no long-term contract.
