

ColoringBook.com Opens National Book Submission Program for Authors and Independent Publishers

Really Big Coloring Books® offers creators an opportunity to have completed books considered for listing, sale, and distribution through national sales channels

ST. LOUIS, MO, UNITED STATES, September 1, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The new online program offers creators an opportunity to have completed books considered for listing, sale, and distribution through ColoringBook.com and other Really Big Coloring Books® sales channels.

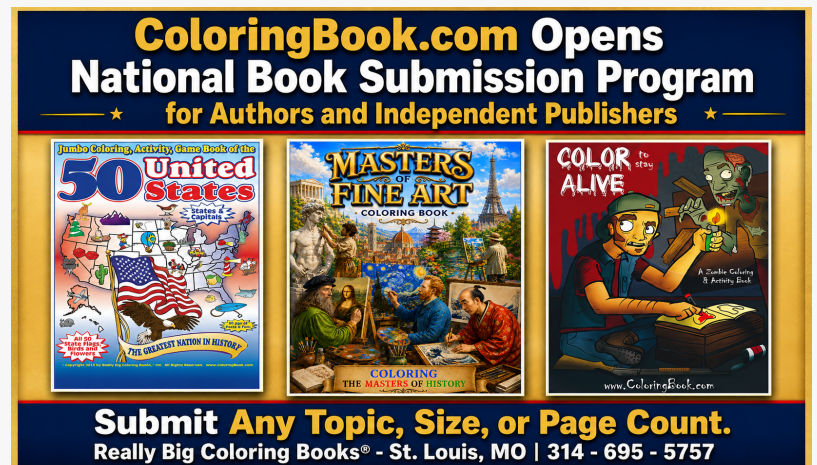

Really Big Coloring Books®, Inc. (RBCB), owner of ColoringBook.com®, and other definitive Top-Level Coloring Book Category Domain Assets, has launched a national book submission program inviting authors, illustrators, educators, independent publishers, and content creators to submit qualifying books and creative work for review. Founded in 1988, the company is based in St. Louis, MO, and prints, designs, and publishes with a staff of editors, writers, and artists that helps creators and other publishers achieve mass distribution.

Many talented authors and independent publishers have created quality books but need an established platform to help introduce those titles to a larger audience.”

N. Wayne Bell, US Based Publisher

Through the new online submission portal, authors and publishers may present completed coloring books, activity books, educational books, storybooks, children's books, specialty publications, and general-interest books for possible listing, sale, or distribution through the expanding RBCB sales channels.

New online program offers creators an opportunity to have completed books considered for listing, sale, and distribution through ColoringBook.com and other Really Big Coloring Books® sales channels.

Illustrators may submit sample artwork or links to online portfolios. Coloring-book artists should demonstrate clean outlines, closed shapes, open coloring spaces, and age-appropriate subject matter. Creators must also disclose the use of AI-generated or AI-assisted content.
