Josh Lyons and Mark Guerra

Led by CEO Josh Lyons and Founder Mark Guerra, HomeLYNQ combines real estate education with business strategy, leadership development, personal growth and relationship-building. The expansion reflects HomeLYNQ's approach to creating an environment where people at different stages of their real estate journeys can learn from experienced professionals while developing relationships across the real estate and business communities.

"At HomeLYNQ, we believe relationships create opportunities. Our goal is to give anyone willing to put in the time and effort the chance to learn, grow and connect — and build real wealth through real estate," said Josh Lyons, CEO of HomeLYNQ. "Mark and I both come from modest backgrounds, and we know firsthand how life-changing this education can be. At the end of the day, we're two guys who love real estate and want to do our part to make the world a little better — through education, training, and the growth we help our members achieve."

Combining Education, Growth and Professional Connections

HomeLYNQ's educational model is centered on three principles: Learn, Grow and Connect.

The organization provides programming addressing real estate strategy, investing, business development, leadership, financial awareness, personal development and professional relationship-building. Members range from individuals beginning to explore real estate to experienced investors and industry professionals interested in continuing their education and sharing knowledge.

The company's name reflects its relationship-driven philosophy. HomeLYNQ is built around the concept "Leverage Your Network Quickly," emphasizing the role that authentic professional relationships, knowledge-sharing and industry connections can play in professional development.

The Professional Network further supports that approach by connecting members with real estate and allied professionals for education, introductions and collaboration.

Experience Behind the HomeLYNQ Leadership

Lyons brings a combination of investigative, business and real estate experience to his role as CEO.

Before joining HomeLYNQ, he served as a vice president at an investigations firm, conducting corporate intelligence and due diligence involving business partners across a range of engagements.

Alongside his professional career, Lyons developed decades of experience and interest in real estate investing after purchasing his first property in his mid-twenties. His experience has included short-term and traditional rentals, commercial real estate, homeowner financing, lending and other investments.

Lyons met Guerra through a business mastermind event and later participated in one of Guerra's small-group real estate mastermind classes. Their professional relationship developed around a shared interest in real estate education, personal growth and community.

Guerra brings more than 30 years of real estate investing experience to HomeLYNQ. After building his career through hands-on investing, he began sharing his experience through small-group masterminds focused on real estate investing.

Guerra subsequently developed the vision for HomeLYNQ as a broader community bringing together real estate strategy, business education, personal development and professional relationships.

Today, Guerra's real estate experience and perspective on emerging industry trends complement Lyons' investigative background, problem-solving approach and leadership experience.

As HomeLYNQ continues developing its community, the organization plans to expand its educational programming, live and virtual experiences and professional resources while maintaining its focus on practical education, personal growth and meaningful industry relationships.
