Florida Injury Attorneys Urge Victims to File Claims Within Two-Year Deadline

Plantation Florida Personal Injury Law Firm Urges Injury Victims to Seek Legal Counsel Promptly in Light of the Two-Year Statute of Limitations

Florida personal injury law firm Cohen & Juda, P.A. highlights the urgent need for injury victims in Florida to file their claims before the updated two-year statute of limitations in order to retain eligibility to pursue monetary compensation.

PLANTATION, FL, UNITED STATES, September 3, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Since Florida reduced the statute of limitations for negligence claims from four years to two in 2023, injury victims must act quickly to preserve their rights. Attorneys Harvey M. Cohen and Gary H. Juda of Cohen and Juda, P.A., stress the importance of prompt legal action for those affected by accidents.

Cohen and Juda represent plaintiffs in state and federal court in various practice areas, including personal injury, wrongful death, vehicle accidents, medical malpractice, product deficiencies, electrocution, nursing home neglect, aviation incidents, and many other types of cases leading to serious injury or death. They recognize the urgency of making the public aware of the condensed timeframe for seeking justice and compensation following a severe injury or fatality caused by someone else's negligence.

"The new time limit creates an urgency for victims to start the legal process sooner rather than later," Harvey M. Cohen explained. "Our firm is committed to helping clients file within this critical deadline to maintain their chance at recovery," noted Juda.

Gary H. Juda emphasized, "This change underscores the importance of seeking legal counsel immediately after an accident. Waiting too long could mean losing the opportunity to pursue justice and compensation."
