

Rolling Suds Reno Helps Homeowners Clear Wildfire Ash and Smoke Residue as Northern Nevada Recovers

Certified technicians use soft washing and pressure washing to remove exterior soot, ash, and smoke film from homes and businesses affected by the recent fires.

RENO, NV, UNITED STATES, September 2, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- After weeks of wildfire activity across northern Nevada — including the Hawk Fire, which burned more than 15,000 acres northwest of Reno and destroyed dozens of homes before crews reached near-full containment — many residents returning to their properties are finding exteriors coated in ash, soot, and a fine smoke film. Rolling Suds Reno is offering professional exterior cleaning to help homeowners and business owners restore their properties as the community moves from emergency into recovery.

Wildfire ash and smoke residue don't stay where they land. They settle across siding, roofs, decks, patios, driveways, fences, windows, and outdoor furniture, where the fine, gritty material can dull and stain surfaces and get stirred back into the air with every gust of wind or pass of a broom. For properties that came through the fires intact, clearing that residue is one of the first practical steps toward getting a home or storefront back to normal.

Rolling Suds Reno's crews handle that work with methods matched to each surface: gentle soft washing for siding, roofs, and other delicate materials, and pressure washing for hard surfaces like concrete, brick, and stone. Technicians are certified, equipped with state-of-the-art, fully loaded water trucks, and use Rolling Suds' proprietary cleaning formula to lift residue rather than just push it around. The service covers both residential and commercial properties and focuses on a building's exterior surfaces — the ash, soot, and smoke film left behind on the outside of a structure — as part of a property owner's broader recovery.

"Our neighbors have been through a lot these past few weeks," said Jesse McKanna, franchise owner of Rolling Suds Reno. "Getting ash and smoke residue off the outside of a home is a small, concrete thing we can take off someone's plate while they focus on everything else. We want that part to be easy for the families and businesses in our community."

Homeowners and businesses affected by the recent wildfires can contact Rolling Suds Reno at (775) 910-7357 to schedule an exterior property assessment and cleaning. Every job is backed by the company's 100% satisfaction guarantee.
