

Curity appoints Robert Brundin as CFO amid continued international growth

Robert Brundin joins Curity as CFO, bringing experience from scaling international technology companies.

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN, September 3, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Curity has appointed Robert Brundin as Chief Financial Officer (CFO). Brundin brings experience from scaling SaaS companies as well as from private equity and will play a key role as Curity continues its international growth.

Brundin began his career at PwC and has held senior finance roles across several companies. As CFO at edtech company Urkund, he helped steer the company through a period of rapid growth. Most recently, he worked in the private equity sector, supporting portfolio companies building out their finance functions and processes, and holding interim roles as Head of M&A and CFO.

Curity is growing fast, and we need to develop our organization at the same pace. Robert brings the experience, analytical mindset and pragmatic approach we need as we scale.”

Gustaf Sahlman, CEO at Curity

“The opportunity to join Curity at this stage of its growth was what attracted me most. The team is highly skilled, and the product is strong. My role is to make sure the finance organization not only keeps pace as the company grows, but actively supports that growth through better insights, simpler processes and better information for decision-making,” said Robert Brundin.

“Curity is growing fast, and we need to develop our organization at the same pace. As we scale, we also want to become increasingly data-driven in how we make decisions. Robert has been on this type of journey before and combines that experience with an analytical and pragmatic approach. He is a strong match for Curity,” said Gustaf Sahlman, CEO at Curity.
