COCOCO Home Spotlights Made-to-Order Sectionals Built to Fit the Room

The North Carolina custom furniture maker gives buyers control over sectional size, configuration, upholstery, and finishing details, with each piece.

CHARLOTTE, NC, UNITED STATES, September 3, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- COCOCO Home, a family-owned North Carolina custom furniture maker, is spotlighting its made-to-order sectional collection this fall, offering homeowners and interior designers a highly personalized alternative to mass-produced furniture. Each piece is made order by order in the company's Claremont, North Carolina workshop, with customers able to tailor dimensions, configuration, upholstery, and other design details to suit their space and personal style.

The process starts with understanding how the furniture needs to work in the room. Customers can choose from a wide range of sectional styles and explore options for dimensions, seat depth, upholstery, and finishing details. COCOCO Home's material selection includes natural and protected leathers, luxurious velvets, performance fabrics, and other premium upholstery options.

Because the furniture is produced in COCOCO Home's own North Carolina workshop rather than selected from a fixed inventory of finished pieces, the company can accommodate a high degree of customization. That flexibility includes oversized configurations, custom frames, unusual dimensions, different sectional layouts, and radius-corner designs that can help furniture work more naturally within the room.

The Monroe collection demonstrates the range of that made-to-order approach. Available in both leather and fabric, Monroe sectionals have been produced in configurations ranging from large chaise sectionals and U-shaped layouts to double-chaise designs and radius-corner sectionals, with custom sizing available for rooms that do not fit standard retail dimensions.

For shoppers comparing the Monroe with popular luxury sectionals such as the RH Maxwell or Arhaus Kipton, COCOCO Home offers a different level of made-to-order flexibility. Rather than limiting customers to predetermined sectional modules, COCOCO Home can adjust dimensions and configurations around the room itself, including oversized pieces, unusual layouts, special sizing, and radius corners.

Construction is another point of distinction. COCOCO Home uses a high-density Leggett & Platt pocketed-coil spring system beneath its seating, paired with Ultracel high-resiliency foam, additional layers of soft luxe foam, and Trillium cushioning. Back pillows are also constructed with Trillium fill and additional support through the lower portion of the pillow. Together, those materials are selected to create a supportive, comfortable sit while maintaining shape and resilience over time.

The sectional program reflects the same philosophy that runs through COCOCO Home's broader collection: furniture should be made around the way a customer wants to live. For homeowners trying to fill an awkward corner, create seating for a large media room, or anchor an open floor plan without settling for standard retail dimensions, made-to-order sofas and sectionals provide greater flexibility in both scale and configuration.

Customers can visit COCOCO Home's Cornelius showroom to experience furniture in person and review leather, fabric, and velvet options with a consultant. Buyers are encouraged to bring measurements of their space so the team can help recommend dimensions and configurations suited to the room.

For customers outside the Charlotte area, COCOCO Home also offers virtual consultations directly from the showroom. During a live video appointment, a consultant can walk customers through furniture styles, dimensions, fabrics, and leathers while showing pieces in the showroom, giving buyers a better sense of scale, proportions, and overall comfort before placing an order.

Swatches can then be sent directly to the customer's home so upholstery colors, textures, and materials can be evaluated in the room where the furniture will ultimately live. Together, virtual showroom appointments and physical swatches allow customers nationwide to participate more closely in the custom design process without having to visit North Carolina in person.

COCOCO Home serves customers across the United States, with white-glove delivery available as its standard delivery method. The service includes delivery into the home, installation, and removal of packaging materials. Delivery charges are calculated separately based on factors including the size of the order and destination.

Customers interested in exploring a made-to-order sectional can visit cococohome.com to browse current collections, request swatches, schedule a virtual consultation, or learn more about visiting the Cornelius showroom.

People often come to us because they have a room where a standard sectional just doesn't quite work. What we can do is look at the space, the dimensions, and how they actually want to use the room, then build the furniture around those needs. From the internal construction to the upholstery and configuration, every choice is made with the finished piece in mind. Whether someone visits us in person or works with us through a virtual consultation, we want them to feel confident that the sectional is being built specifically for their home.
