The move comes as Fun For All Ages prepares to launch its second season on September 8. Hosted by Emmy-winning writer Frank Santopadre, the show continues the spirit of GGACP with wide-ranging conversations about the pop culture that shaped generations. At the same time, the complete Gilbert Gottfried's Amazing Colossal Podcast (GGACP) archive—more than 600 episodes featuring an extraordinary range of comedians, actors, filmmakers, musicians, writers and cultural personalities—is moving to Impressions.fm.

Ben Watson, CEO of Impressions.fm said, "We're excited to welcome Frank, Fun For All Ages and the entire GGACP catalog to Impressions.fm. It's a great fit for what we've built: a premium, personality-driven content platform with recognizable talent and deeply engaged audiences. For advertisers and brands, it brings a massive library of evergreen and new entertainment content to the scale of our broader Impressions network.

Over a decade, GGACP featured guests including Jason Alexander, Matthew Broderick, Bob Costas, Patton Oswalt, Richard Kind and "Weird Al" Yankovic, among hundreds of others. For Dara Gottfried, the move provides a new home for her late husband's work. "Gilbert was an iconic comic, with an intense knowledge of film and TV, and absolutely loved making people laugh. That's what made GGACP so special, and why the archive still feels so alive." Dara added, "We're very happy that we are finding a new home with Impressions.fm, where longtime fans and new generations can discover Gilbert and Frank and the incredible people they talked to."

Fun For All Ages carries the GGACP tradition forward, in a big way. Guests on season one included Robert Smigel, Steven Weber, Svengoolie, Michael Giacchino, Susie Essman and Illeana Douglas, all digging into pop culture topics they love.

"Both GGACP and FFAA have always been about interesting people talking about the things they are obsessed with—and then capturing those conversations for posterity," said Santopadre. "Impressions.fm understands that, has a complimentary network of podcasts, and knows how to give advertisers a real opportunity to be part of it. That made them an easy choice for us."

The Impressions.fm network represents more than 300 podcasters and video creators across comedy, entertainment, sports, finance, and news. Its portfolio includes The Rolling Stone Interview, All Things Comedy, Bill Burr's Monday Morning Podcast, The Ides of April with Alec Baldwin, Holding Court with Eboni K. Williams, How Did We Get Weird with Vanessa Bayer and Jonah Bayer, and many more leading programs.

For agencies, brands, and in-house media teams, Impressions.fm offers host-read and dynamically inserted advertising and custom integrations and spanning podcasts, YouTube, OTT, CTV and social, supported by robust campaign forecasting and unified reporting.

The second season of FFAA starts on September 8, beginning with a special two-part episode starring Judd Apatow, who joins Santopadre for an extended conversation about his life and career.
