Return2PLAi issues a binary in-or-out call on a named athlete's game-day availability, delivered as an API, up to 24 hours before kickoff.

LAS VEGAS, NV, UNITED STATES, September 8, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- SCCG Management, an advisory and consultancy firm serving publicly traded and privately held corporations across the global gaming, betting, and prediction markets sectors, today announced that it is representing Return2PLAi, a game-day athlete availability technology, in market.

Return2PLAi answers one question: will a named athlete play in a specific game, up to 24 hours before kickoff. Where a team's own official designation is already closed, meaning a player is on

A sportsbook, a fantasy platform and a data provider all need this same answer. We are introducing the brand to the partners who already need it.”

Injured Reserve, Out, or on the Physically Unable to Perform list, a plain rule reads that designation and returns the call immediately, with no model involved. Where the designation is genuinely ambiguous, meaning a player is listed as Questionable, Limited, or Did Not Practice, the public injury report stops being useful, and the system weighs current reporting against calibrated priors and returns a bounded, traceable call instead of a coin flip, under a confidence ceiling enforced in code so the call can never overstate its own certainty. Every prediction is stamped with the exact rules or version that produced it, so any single call can be checked after the fact.

The weightings that turn a reasoned call into a bounded answer use predefined injury and availability characteristics, and have been iteratively refined across multiple NFL seasons based on observed performance. The prediction methodology behind this system is patented, with claims granted.

Built to be delivered as an API, Return2PLAi is designed for the businesses that already have to answer this question every week: sportsbooks pricing a line, fantasy and DFS platforms setting a lineup, sports data aggregators feeding both, and media companies reporting the result. The product is designed to sit inside a pipeline these businesses already run, rather than to compete with what they already sell.

"A sportsbook, a fantasy platform and a data provider all need this same answer. We are introducing the brand to the partners who already need it," said Stephen Crystal, Founder and CEO of SCCG Management.

SCCG Management works across four lines of business: capital introductions, international expansion, affiliate and white-label partnerships, and strategic advisory and M&A. Return2PLAi becomes the newest technology brand in SCCG's marketing representation programme.
