I want people to understand partnership, dancing with each other, sharing a moment, and not being afraid to dance. In that moment, you are reassuring your partner that you are there for one another.”

Rudy Ru$h

recording artist Rudy Ru$h has released the official music video for his new single, “Here for You,” a vibrant record that brings romance and Bouyon energy to the dance floor. Inspired by real-life relationships, “Here for You” captures two people letting go, dancing together, and reassuring one another that they are fully present in their relationship.

The record pairs Rudy’s melodic delivery with an infectious Caribbean groove. During the writing process, Rudy and his collaborators drew inspiration from the playful dance-floor energy of Sisqó’s classic “Thong Song,” reimagining that feeling through a modern Bouyon and crossover lens. Created during a collaborative studio session, “Here for You” was written by Rudy Ru$h, Yasmine and Chioneso, with production by Ridge. Rudy credits the songwriters, producer, performers and creative team for helping bring the record to life.

The music video was created in collaboration with MultiArtistry Entertainment, which cast the featured dancers. Showcasing Caribbean women of different body types, heights and complexions, the visual celebrates their confidence, individuality and natural beauty while allowing a broader audience to feel seen and represented. Over Labor Day weekend, Rudy Ru$h performed at several venues, where “Here for You” had patrons wining and jumping in celebration. The enthusiastic response offered an early sign that the Dominica-born artist may have something special on his hands as the record continues to build momentum.

Born in Dominica and based in the United States, Rudy describes “Here for You” as the meeting point between the high-energy Bouyon sound of his island roots and the crossover influences of his American experience.

The official music video for "Here for You" is available now.
