Tehya Travel Launches Dedicated Multigenerational and Family Journey Planning for Affluent Travelers

Chicago luxury travel advisory formalizes dedicated multigenerational and family journey planning for affluent travelers

CHICAGO, IL, UNITED STATES, September 10, 2026 / EINPresswire.com/ -- Tehya Travel, a luxury travel advisory launched in 2026 by hospitality and private aviation entrepreneurs Arturo Gomez and Zachary Zisook, announced today a dedicated planning practice for multigenerational and family journeys.

Family travel and multigenerational trips consistently rank among the strongest categories in luxury travel, and they are also among the most complicated to plan well. Travelers arriving from different cities, room configurations that keep a family close without crowding anyone, pacing that works for grandparents and young children in the same itinerary, and dining and activities that hold everyone's attention are details that determine whether a milestone trip feels effortless or exhausting.

Tehya Travel's family journey practice is built around exactly those details. The team coordinates split arrivals across cities and countries, structures accommodations around how each family actually lives, plans movement between destinations at a pace appropriate to every generation traveling, and arranges private aviation where the mission calls for it.

The practice grew out of trips the founders have already planned. In one recent journey, family members traveled from different parts of the United States to gather in Europe, with travelers in their eighties for whom movement within Europe needed to be arranged privately. Coordinating separate arrivals into private terminals and bringing the full family together on schedule is the kind of work the new practice formalizes.

"The trips that matter most to families are usually the hardest ones to organize," said Arturo

Gomez, Co-Founder of Tehya Travel. "A milestone birthday, an anniversary, three generations in one villa. Our job is to handle the logistics so the family's only job is being together."

Tehya Travel's approach favors strong recommendations over endless options. Rather than presenting a dozen properties, the team narrows choices based on the family's priorities and is candid when a request is likely to work against the trip the client actually wants.

The advisory arranges accommodations, experiences, ground logistics, and travel coordination worldwide, with particular depth in Europe, the Caribbean, Mexico, and Latin America. Through its affiliation with Fora Travel, Tehya provides clients preferred rates, amenities, and recognition at leading hotels and resorts globally.
