Hooked on the Water to Bring New Lakeside Dining and Entertainment Destination to Lake Murray

Opening in late 2026, the multi-concept property will feature two dining concepts, an outdoor bar, live-music amphitheater and private-event space

LEXINGTON, SC, UNITED STATES, September 11, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Hooked on the Water, a new lakeside dining and entertainment destination in Lexington, South Carolina, is preparing to open on Lake Murray in late 2026.

Set to become one of South Carolina's largest waterfront dining and entertainment destinations of its kind, Hooked on the Water will bring five distinct hospitality concepts together on one property. Plans include an elevated fine-dining restaurant, casual downstairs dining, an outdoor social space, a live-music venue, and dedicated private-event space. The property is located within a 66-acre residential retreat community on Lake Murray.

The culinary program, led by local chef Andy Marchant, will pair Southern influences with an emphasis on fresh, local ingredients, offering distinct menus across the property's fine-dining and casual concepts. The Fine Dining Room & Bar will showcase the more elevated side of the culinary program, featuring prime steaks and seafood dishes. The downstairs dining concept will take a more relaxed approach with gourmet burgers, unique flatbreads, and more.

"There's really nothing else like this on Lake Murray," said Marchant. "We've put a lot of thought into the menus and what we felt was missing here and what people would actually enjoy. We're excited to finally get the doors open and let people experience it."

The venue will host live music and other programming, with performers and event details to be announced closer to opening. Hooked on the Water will also introduce the Anchor Club, a membership program designed to keep guests connected to the property with notices and invitations to special events. Additional details will be released ahead of opening.

Hooked on the Water is expected to open in late 2026 at 110 Anglers Way in Lexington, South Carolina. Additional information, menus, entertainment schedules, and private-event booking details will be announced in the coming weeks.

Drop Anchor. Stay Awhile.
