NEW YORK CITY, NY, UNITED STATES, September 14, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- New York City-based actress, dancer, content creator and entrepreneur Emma Arje has signed with Daniel Hoff Agency, marking the latest step in the 16-year-old performer's growing professional career.

Emma Arje brings experience across feature film, commercials, dance and digital content to her new representation, including work on director Darren Aronofsky's "Caught Stealing" and Adam Brooks' "The Life List". Her commercial work includes principal roles for major brands Amazon and Volkswagen, adding professional advertising experience to a résumé that continues to expand across different areas of the entertainment industry.

The Daniel Hoff Agency signing comes as Emma focuses on building upon that foundation and pursuing increasingly substantial opportunities in film and television. She has committed significant time to developing her craft, where she currently trains in audition technique with Wendy Faraone and has studied privately with Lori Lively. Her additional on-camera training includes workshops with casting directors Amber Horn and Lisa London.

Dance is another important part of Emma's background. She has trained at New York City's Broadway Dance Center in hip-hop, jazz and Broadway-style dance and performs hip-hop at the intermediate/advanced level. Her physical skill set also includes gymnastics, including walkovers, front handsprings and cartwheels. That combination of performance and movement gives Emma a versatile foundation as she continues developing as a young screen actress.

Emma Arje is also part of a generation of performers building an audience beyond traditional film and television. As a content creator, she has amassed more than 13,000 followers on TikTok, with multiple videos reaching viral audiences. Her experience creating short-form digital content has allowed her to develop an understanding of engaging directly with an audience while establishing her own voice and personality online.

For Emma signing with Daniel Hoff Agency represents an important progression in a career she has already begun developing across both traditional and digital entertainment. While social media has given her an additional creative outlet and an opportunity to connect directly with an audience, acting remains at the center of her professional ambitions.

Her experience on professional film sets, including working on an Aronofsky-directed feature, has given Emma early exposure to large-scale filmmaking, while her principal commercial work has further strengthened her experience working professionally in front of the camera.

Now represented by Daniel Hoff Agency, Emma is focused on continuing her training, expanding her professional credits and pursuing roles that allow her to grow as an actress. With experience spanning film, commercials, dance and digital media, and an established social audience already following her journey, Emma enters this next chapter with a contemporary skill set that reflects the changing landscape for young performers today.
