

TaxZerone Urges S Corps and Partnerships to File Their Extended 2025 Returns by Tomorrow's September 15 Deadline

TaxZerone helps businesses and tax professionals e-file extended 2025 Form 1120-S and Form 1065 returns and distribute applicable Schedule K-1s.

SAN JOSE, CA, UNITED STATES,
September 14, 2026 /

EINPresswire.com/ -- U.S. businesses have just one day left to meet the September 15, 2026, extended federal tax filing deadline. TaxZerone, an IRS-authorized e-file provider, is urging S corporations, partnerships, and tax professionals to complete and electronically file their outstanding 2025 business tax returns before the extended deadline expires.

1120-S & 1065

Business Tax Forms - Form 1120-S and Form 1065

For Eligible calendar-year S corporations and partnerships that received a six-month extension, the additional filing time is now coming to an end. Businesses that fail to file by the applicable deadline may face IRS late-filing penalties and other consequences, depending on their circumstances.

TaxZerone helps businesses and tax professionals prepare and electronically file Form 1120-S and Form 1065, along with applicable schedules and supporting forms.

Filed Form 7004 in March? Tomorrow Is the Final Filing Day

Many calendar-year S corporations and partnerships originally had a March 16, 2026, federal filing deadline for their 2025 tax returns. Eligible businesses that timely filed Form 7004 generally received an automatic extension of time to file.

That extended filing period ends September 15, 2026.

S corporations generally file Form 1120-S, U.S. Income Tax Return for an S Corporation, while partnerships generally file Form 1065, U.S. Return of Partnership Income.

Tax professionals managing multiple client returns should review their remaining extended returns and prioritize any filings that have not yet been completed.

Waiting until the final hours can leave less time to address missing information, correct errors, or resolve filing issues before the deadline.

Businesses Should File Before the Final Hours

With only one day remaining, businesses that have not completed their returns should prioritize the following steps:

- ☐☐ Confirm whether the business is required to file Form 1120-S or Form 1065.
- ☐☐ Gather the financial and business information needed to complete the return.
- ☐☐ Verify the business's EIN, legal name, address, and tax year.
- ☐☐ Review shareholder or partner information.
- ☐☐ Prepare applicable Schedule K-1s.
- ☐☐ Review income, deductions, credits, and other applicable tax items.
- ☐☐ Confirm that required schedules and supporting forms are included.
- ☐☐ Review the completed return for missing or inconsistent information.
- ☐☐ Submit the federal return electronically as soon as it is ready.
- ☐☐ Retain the electronic filing confirmation and relevant tax records.

Starting the filing process earlier on September 14 can provide valuable time to address unexpected issues instead of discovering them immediately before the deadline.

What Happens If You Miss the Filing Deadline?

Failing to file by the applicable deadline, may result in IRS penalties and interest unless an exception or reasonable-cause relief applies.

For 2025 returns filed in 2026, the IRS states:

- ☐☐ Late filing: $255 per shareholder/partner, per month or part of a month, up to 12 months.
- ☐☐ Late payment (1120-S): 0.5% of unpaid tax per month, up to 25%.
- ☐☐ Late filing with tax due (1120-S): Additional 5% of unpaid tax per month, up to 25%.
- ☐☐ Late/incorrect Schedule K-1: $340 per Schedule K-1.
- ☐☐ Intentional disregard: $680 per K-1 or 10% of the reportable amount, whichever is greater.
- ☐☐ Interest: May accrue on unpaid tax and certain penalties.
- ☐☐ Form 1065: The partnership generally does not pay federal income tax at the entity level; income typically passes through to the partners.

Penalty rules can vary depending on the circumstances, and certain exceptions or reasonable-cause provisions may apply.
