

EPISODE 2 OUT NOW: 'FLIGHT OF THE FALLEN' BRINGS TORSTEN TO BREWMMASTER CHRISTIAN HEURICH

The second episode of the Washington occult-noir audio drama takes the case to the Brewmaster's Castle and the real Gilded-Age titan at the heart of Season 2

WASHINGTON, DC, UNITED STATES, September 15, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Episode 2 of Dupont Investigations, Flight of the Fallen, is streaming now everywhere you listen to podcasts. After the rooftop horror that opened the season, occult private investigator Torsten Somersby and his partner Nigel Clemmons are summoned to the home of a real Washington legend: brewmaster Christian Heurich.

After I toured the Heurich House several years ago, brewmaster Christian Heurich's legacy fascinated me. I am so thrilled to bring this historical figure to life in fiction.”

Dupont Investigations co-creator and showrunner.*

Received by Heurich's butler, Andrew Bell, the investigators hear an unsettling story seventy-five years in the making, and agree to hunt the winged thing haunting the capital. Heurich was no invention. The German immigrant behind Senate beer, he was for decades the largest private employer in Washington, second only to the federal government, and built the Foggy Bottom brewery and the landmark near Dupont Circle still known as the Brewmaster's Castle. Once branded a wartime spy by the papers, he becomes, in Flight of the Fallen, the man who sets Torsten on the trail of “the fallen.”

“After I toured the Heurich House several years ago, brewmaster Christian Heurich's legacy fascinated me. I am so thrilled to bring this historical figure to life in fiction,” said Marc Benjamin Langston, Dupont Investigations co-creator and showrunner.
