Careers Launch offers flexible solutions that scale from efficient, automated tools for individual contributors to advanced services for executives. This versatile approach allows businesses to provide professional transition support without unnecessary overhead.

Before joining Careers Launch, Bruno served as Vice President & General Manager at Rahr Corporation, and spent over a decade at Honeywell International in finance, general management, and business development roles.

"Bruno brings a firsthand understanding of the operational and business impact that organizational change has on both companies and their employees," said Curtis LaClaire, CEO of Careers Launch Talent Group. "His broad commercial expertise combined with his deep financial acumen allows him to understand our clients' priorities and deliver solutions that address business needs while ultimately supporting the people impacted by difficult decisions."

"Outplacement support must be practical and accessible" said Stumpf. "At Careers Launch, we blend progressive systems and tools with professional coaching to deliver support that gets employees back to work. Whether an employer needs critical resume tools for an individual contributor or advanced services for leadership, we provide the right resource. Our focus is to deliver a seamless transition process for the impacted employee(s) and organization while protecting company reputation even in challenging times."

Outplacement services provide structured career transition support to employees affected by layoffs, RIFs, restructuring, and other organizational changes. For employers, offering outplacement is more than the right thing to do; it can accelerate employees' return to work, reduce the financial impact of extended unemployment, protect the company's reputation and employer brand, and help mitigate the risk of costly employment-related disputes.
