"Preparing for a trade show involves a lot of moving pieces, and printing shouldn't be one of the things keeping an exhibitor up at night," said Omid M., Founder & Owner of Printing Fly. "Our goal is to become a dependable printing partner that businesses and agencies can come back to for everything from a single banner to a complete trade show display package."

Printing Fly has increasingly positioned its services around trade shows, corporate events and large-format business printing. The company works with both local organizations and companies traveling to Los Angeles for conferences, expos and other events.

The company also provides graphic design and file-preparation support for businesses that need assistance preparing artwork for large-format production.

Speed has become another important part of the company's trade show offering. Printing Fly specializes in fast-turnaround printing, with many trade show products available on accelerated production schedules depending on the product, quantity and artwork readiness.

"When an event date is fixed, there isn't much room for error," Omid added. "We've built our process around communication, quality control and keeping projects moving. We want clients to feel like there is an actual team behind their order instead of simply uploading a file and hoping everything works out."

For Los Angeles customers, Printing Fly offers free shipping, allowing completed materials to be delivered directly to businesses and event destinations throughout the area.
