CHARLOTTE, NC, UNITED STATES, September 15, 2026 / EINPresswire.com/ -- Nature Provides: Exploring the Science of Embryonic Plant Stem Cells, the second installment in Jennifer O'Brien Payeur's documentary series, has been selected to screen at CineHealth, the first and largest international film festival focused exclusively on health and wellness storytelling. The festival takes place in Philadelphia as part of Fierce Pharma Week, with a red carpet awards event scheduled for tonight, September 15, 2026, at the National Constitution Center.

The selection places Episode 2 alongside work from filmmakers, clinicians, and patient advocates from around the world, all competing for recognition in a festival built specifically around the intersection of storytelling and health.

The film examines the clinical and biochemical foundations of Gemmotherapy, the century-old European practice of using concentrated embryonic plant stem cells for healing, and features Dr. Joseph Cannillo, founder of Forza Vitale Laboratory and one of the field's leading researchers, alongside physicians from around the world who use the therapy in their own practices. Cameras follow the harvest and extraction process at the source in Italy, tracing how a raw plant bud becomes a clinical remedy.

“Science so often gets buried in a language most people can’t access. This selection means our film is doing exactly what we set out to do: to put the research on Gemmotherapy in front of the very audience of clinicians and health leaders who can put it to use,” said Jenn Payeur, director of the film and founder of Nature Provides.

The CineHealth selection extends a run of festival recognition for the series. Episode 1, Nature Provides: The Ancient Wisdom of Plant Stem Cells, won Best Feature Documentary at the Alpine International Film Festival in Bern, Switzerland. Episode 2 has gone on to win five honors at the Dreamz Catcher International Film Festival, including Best Documentary Film, Best Nature/Environment/Wildlife Project, and Best Wellness/Fitness Video.

The selection follows a series of recent milestones for Payeur, including a feature in Townsend Letter, one of the most respected publications in integrative and naturopathic medicine, which spotlighted her new book, Ancient Plant Wisdom: How to Improve and Maintain Your Health Using Concentrated Plant Stem Cell Remedies. The book is available now through major booksellers and covers more than 70 plant stem cell remedies and addresses over 100 chronic and degenerative conditions.

Mentored by Joseph Cannillo, BSc, MS, PhD, DC, a leading authority at Forza Vitale and one of the foremost experts in Gemmotherapy worldwide, Payeur continues to travel the world as an educator for health professionals and laypeople alike on the use of plant stem cell remedies. She is also the host of The Wellness Sherpa podcast, available on Apple Podcasts, Spotify, Audible, YouTube, and Nature-Provides.com, as well as the star of the internationally award-winning documentary, Nature Provides: The Ancient Wisdom of Plant Stem Cells.
