The gaming services company is opening beta progression support and taking pre-orders for WoW Forever launch services ahead of the November 4 release.

ExpCarry opens WoW Forever beta services and launch pre-orders ahead of the game's global release.

DOVER, DE, UNITED STATES, September 17, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- ExpCarry LLC, an online gaming services company, has opened World of Warcraft: Forever beta progression support and launch-service pre-orders as Blizzard begins beta testing for its new permanent World of Warcraft experience.

World of Warcraft: Forever enters beta on September 17, 2026 and is scheduled to launch globally on November 4. The game returns players to a reimagined original Azeroth with a level 60 cap while adding new quests, dungeons, raids, professions, PvP content, Legacy progression and other long-term systems.

ExpCarry has opened a dedicated WoW Forever services catalog covering the first available progression options and launch preparation. Current pre-order services include Leveling 1–60, Gold, Honor Farm and flexible Hourly Boost options, with additional service categories planned as beta testing confirms final progression requirements, rewards and game systems.

For players with access to the WoW Forever beta, ExpCarry is also preparing beta progression support. Available custom objectives can include Leveling 1–30, questing, zone progression, farming, professions, exploration, dungeon progression and other activities that are accessible during the testing period.

Beta services are handled as custom orders because available content, level ranges, balance and progression systems may change throughout testing. ExpCarry plans to update its catalog as new beta information becomes available rather than relying on unconfirmed launch assumptions.

The company expects its WoW Forever offering to expand into dungeons, raids, professions, reputations, gear progression, class quests, attunements, Legacy progression, PvP, mounts and other character-development services as those systems become available and their requirements are confirmed.

WoW Forever Leveling 1–60 is one of the first progression services available through ExpCarry for launch pre-orders and beta-related character progression.

Players placing launch pre-orders can reserve their place in the service queue before November 4. Actual start times and completion times will depend on server availability, player demand, character requirements and the specific service selected.

ExpCarry also maintains a WoW Forever beta guide covering confirmed release information, gameplay systems and updates discovered throughout the testing period.
