People looking for a criminal defense firm in Indianapolis choose Gemma & Karimi because the firm prepares every case as if it will go to trial. Each client works directly with an experienced attorney from the first consultation through the final outcome.

How the firm works

Gemma & Karimi start every case with one question: what really happened? Before the first hearing, the attorneys review police reports, examine forensic evidence, and look for procedural errors. When needed, they bring in independent experts and investigators.

Experience in Indiana courts

Partners Ron Gemma and Kevin Karimi have about 25 years of combined courtroom experience and more than 50 jury trials. Karimi spent five years as a prosecutor before joining the defense bar, so the team knows how the state builds a case and how to challenge it. Gemma has tried cases ranging from simple battery to felony drug dealing and murder.

That experience gives the firm a working knowledge of the courts in Marion County and nearby jurisdictions, including the judges, the prosecutors, and the local procedures.

Prepared for trial

Many firms treat plea deals as the default. Gemma & Karimi build every case for trial. That preparation has led to dismissals in cases involving flawed breathalyzer data, mishandled evidence, and unconstitutional searches. It also strengthens the firm's position in negotiations, which often produces better outcomes without a trial.

"Preparation is where cases are won," said Ron Gemma, partner at Gemma & Karimi. "When you know the evidence better than anyone else in the room, you protect your client, at trial or at the negotiating table."

Practice areas

Gemma & Karimi represent clients across Indiana in both urban and rural courts. The firm handles DUI and OWI, drug offenses, domestic battery, white-collar charges, sex crimes, major felonies, and expungement.
