

Frank Igwealor's New Book Examines the Intersection of Christian Conscience, Scripture, and American Party Platforms

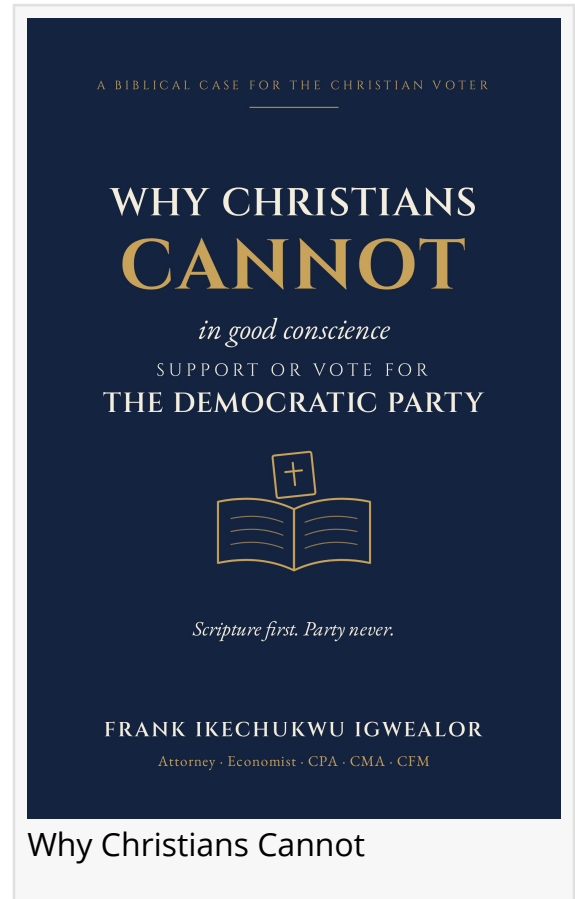

Frank Ikechukwu Igwealor's new book explores political participation through a biblical, legal, and public-policy framework

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, September 21, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Author, attorney, economist, and accountant Frank Ikechukwu Igwealor announces the publication of his new book, Why Christians Cannot in Good Conscience Support or Vote for the Democratic Party, a wide-ranging examination of the relationship between Christian conscience, biblical teaching, political participation, and contemporary American public policy.

The book approaches voting as a subject of moral and civic responsibility and examines how Christians might evaluate political platforms in light of their understanding of Scripture. Although its title states the book's central argument directly, the work also considers competing Christian interpretations and examines areas in which believers may reach different political conclusions.

Across more than 50 chapters, Igwealor addresses subjects including the biblical foundations of civic duty, voting and moral responsibility, abortion, marriage and sexuality, gender identity, parental authority, religious liberty, compelled speech, taxation, economic redistribution, race, immigration, policing, firearms, war, Israel, poverty, health policy, and environmental stewardship.

The book also devotes substantial attention to questions that complicate its central thesis. Separate sections examine biblical arguments commonly advanced by Christians who reach different political conclusions, areas where Republican policies raise biblical questions, the distinction between Christianity and political party allegiance, third-party voting, abstention, split-ticket voting, and the role of individual candidates and local elections.

Igwealor describes his methodology as combining biblical analysis with examination of political platforms, statutes, regulations, judicial decisions, government data, and other source materials. Platform language is identified by year, reflecting the fact that party positions can change over time. The book also distinguishes between issues the author regards as presenting direct theological conflicts and those he considers matters of prudential political judgment.

The publication expressly does not claim that political affiliation determines a person's salvation, sincerity of faith, or standing before God. Nor does it identify any political party with Christianity or the Kingdom of God. Instead, the book presents Igwealor's interpretation of Scripture and his analysis of political and legal questions for readers to examine and evaluate independently.

The volume includes supporting appendices covering platform language, a scriptural index organized by issue, case-law summaries, denominational statements, a voter worksheet, an evidentiary-tiering key, discussion questions, and suggestions for further reading.

Frank Ikechukwu Igwealor is an attorney, economist, Certified Public Accountant (CPA), Certified Management Accountant (CMA), and Certified Financial Manager (CFM). His professional background spans law, accounting, economics, business, and corporate affairs. In this book, he draws on those disciplines to organize a structured examination of the relationship between religious conviction and participation in American civic life.

Why Christians Cannot in Good Conscience Support or Vote for the Democratic Party is published in the United States in its First Edition (2026) under ISBN 979-8-951213-16-7.

The book is intended for readers interested in Christianity and politics, religious liberty, public policy, political ethics, biblical approaches to civic participation, and the continuing debate over the proper relationship between religious conviction and political affiliation in the United States.

Book Details:

Title: Why Christians Cannot in Good Conscience Support or Vote for the Democratic Party

Author: Frank Ikechukwu Igwealor

ISBN: 979-8-951213-16-7

Length: 54 chapters, 336 pages

Availability Amazon: <https://www.amazon.com/dp/B0HKCH1SZK>

About the Author

Frank Ikechukwu Igwealor is an Economist, a California licensed attorney, a Certified Public Accountant, Certified Management Accountant, and Certified Financial Manager. Igwealor is also a California licensed Real Estate Broker since 2005. Igwealor's education includes degrees in Accounting, Economics, Business Administration, Risk Management, and Law. Igwealor lives in Los Angeles and has worked as officer and director of numerous public and private companies in the United States, Europe, Asia, the Middle East, and Africa. Frank is also a local Pastor of a little Charismatic congregation in Los Angeles. Over the years, Frank has authored more than 20 books on Economics, Philosophy, Politics, Religion, Faith, Finance, Stock Markets, Trading, and life in general.

Other Books by the Author

10x Compounding Blueprint, 10X Stock Finder, African Development Paradox, Betrayal, Failure Intelligence, Family Faith and Finance, Fatal Blunders, Momentum Investing Cheat-Code Swing Trader's Blueprint, The Black Republican, The Entrepreneur's Blueprint, The Fallacy of Reciprocity of Generosity, The Forbidden Romance, The God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel, and The Roots of African Poverty

Frank Ikechukwu Igwealor

Frank Ikechukwu Igwealor, CPA, CMA, CFM, ESQ.

email us here

This press release can be viewed online at: <https://www.einpresswire.com/article/943646491>

EIN Presswire's priority is source transparency. We do not allow opaque clients, and our editors try to be careful about weeding out false and misleading content. As a user, if you see something we have missed, please do bring it to our attention. Your help is welcome. EIN Presswire, Everyone's Internet News Presswire™, tries to define some of the boundaries that are reasonable in today's world. Please see our Editorial Guidelines for more information.

© 1995-2026 Newsmatics Inc. All Right Reserved.