/EINPresswire.com/ -- Matthew Bodhi is the musical project of Belgian singer-songwriter Levi van Dommelen, creating poetic alternative music where intimate songwriting meets cinematic soundscapes, emotional vocals and a sense of quiet spirituality.

His musical journey began with experimental rock band Process Of The Spirit before evolving into a solo career and collaborations with international artists and producers. His work has received airplay on Belgian national radio, including Joe FM, Qmusic, Radio 2 and MNM, while his music has also reached film, television and international audiences.

Matthew Bodhi recorded an album with acclaimed producer Phil Vinall, known for his work with artists including Radiohead, Placebo and Zoé. The album is now being released one single at a time following Vinall's passing in December 2025.

Matthew Bodhi - This Void: A Song of Love and Hope Born from a Double Loss

This Void

The first release, This Void, carries a story that reaches far beyond music. Written by Matthew Bodhi and recorded with Vinall, the song took on a profound new meaning after Matthew Bodhi lost his baby son, Elton-Lou, in December 2025.

Rather than being a song only about grief, This Void is about the love that remains, even after loss.

It is music for the space between darkness and light, intimate, cinematic and deeply human, with both the song and its self-made music video serving as a personal tribute to Elton-Lou and Phil Vinall.

Influenced by artists such as Jeff Buckley and Radiohead, Matthew Bodhi creates songs designed not simply to be heard, but to be felt.

"Marvellous. Words and strings that weave a quiet beauty into a story that slowly draws you in."
Jef Neve

"What a brilliant track. The moving string arrangements, with subtle dissonances at their peak, the Springsteen-esque synthesiser that underpins it all, and the repetitive, minimalist yet bone-hard lyrics. I find it hard to compare it to anything I know, but it works incredibly well."
Johannes Genard (School Is Cool)

"There are some voices that move you, in one way or another. That was true a long time ago, and it still is today. Matthew Bodhi once again grabs you by the scruff of the neck with an emotional story about loss, but above all about love and connection. It left me speechless. It's powerful how such an intense loss can lead to such a message."
Raf Van Brussel (Radio Presenter JOE, Singer)

"I like this. He's a good singer, a very good singer, which is a beauty in studios. He's a traditional singer-songwriter, so that's always a joy to work with. He has got the songs to pull it off, so he's got that little something there."
Phil Vinall, on Matthew Bodhi
