

Projio Celebrates Its First WebAward for Architect Website Design

The digital marketing agency wins excellence award for design and innovation.

PORT WASHINGTON, NY, UNITED STATES, September 21, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Great architecture deserves a website designed with the same care. That idea is at the heart of Projio, which creates design-forward websites for architects and building professionals. Now, that approach has earned Projio its first WebAward, with the Michael Kirschman Architecture website receiving the 2026 Architecture Standard of Excellence.

Architects understand better than most that good design has to do more than look impressive. It should create a feeling, guide the experience and serve a clear purpose.”

Fred Cohen, CEO of Projio by Omnizant

The website pairs impactful photography with a clean, intuitive experience that reflects Michael Kirschman Architecture's approach to form and function. The result is a digital showcase that feels true to its work and gives prospective clients a compelling introduction to the firm.

“Architects understand better than most that good design has to do more than look impressive,” said Fred Cohen, CEO of Projio by Omnizant. “It should create a feeling, guide the experience and serve a clear purpose. We brought that same thinking to this website, and we’re incredibly proud that Projio’s first WebAward recognizes a project that captures exactly what we set out to build.”

The award-winning website was designed by Lead Designer Rosalee Valenzuela and developed by Creative Director Bryan VandenHeuvel. Together with the Projio team, they created a digital home for Michael Kirschman Architecture that showcases the firm’s work with clarity, creativity and care.
