The appointment brings Dieppa’s extensive insurance and risk-management experience to the governing body of Citizens, which plays an important role in Florida’s property insurance market. Citizens Property Insurance Corporation was created by the Florida Legislature as a not-for-profit insurer to provide coverage to eligible Florida property owners who are unable to find insurance through the private market.

“Florida’s insurance market touches homeowners, businesses and communities across the state, and I am honored to have the opportunity to contribute to that work,” said Dieppa. “I look forward to working alongside my fellow board members and bringing the perspective I have gained throughout my career in insurance and risk management to support Citizens’ mission and the policyholders it serves.”

Throughout his career, Dieppa has advised business owners, senior executives, families and individuals on complex insurance and risk-management matters. His work has centered on evaluating risk, developing tailored insurance strategies and helping clients navigate an increasingly complex insurance landscape. As Managing Partner of Hotaling Insurance Services’ Miami operation, Dieppa is part of the firm’s senior leadership team and works with clients across a range of insurance needs.

Dieppa's appointment further extends his professional and community leadership. In addition to his work at Hotaling Insurance Services, he has served in leadership roles with the Belen Jesuit Alumni Association and its philanthropic MAGIS Committee. Known for a relationship-driven and highly tailored approach, Dieppa has built his career around helping clients assess complex risks and develop insurance strategies aligned with their individual and business needs. He earned his MBA from the University of Miami and completed his undergraduate studies at the University of Florida.
