“Most people don't think about their water heater until the hot water stops or a leak appears,” said Andrew Grzetich, owner of Plumb Crazy Plumbers. “We want to make it easier for our neighbors to get their system checked, understand what we find and address small concerns before they become bigger problems.”

WHAT THE INSPECTION COVERS

During the inspection, a Plumb Crazy Plumbers technician can assess the water heater's overall condition and check for visible signs of leaks, corrosion, wear and connection issues that may affect performance or reliability.

The inspection may also include a review of key components, safety-related items, and the surrounding area to identify concerns that warrant maintenance, repair or further evaluation. If an issue is found, customers can receive an explanation of the findings and available options.
