Whitten & Lublin is pleased to announce that the firm's Employment & Labour: Non-Unionised Employees practice, along with founding partners David Whitten and Daniel Lublin, has been recognized in the Chambers Canada 2027 guide, one of the most rigorous and closely watched rankings in the legal industry.

Chambers rankings are built on in-depth, independent research, including detailed interviews with clients and peers in the profession, and are widely regarded by corporate counsel and legal buyers as a trusted signal of a firm's real-world standing in a given practice area.

David A. Whitten has been individually ranked by Chambers for seven consecutive years, and this year was placed in Band 1, the guide's top tier for Employment & Labour: Non-Unionised Employees in Ontario. Chambers researchers noted his experience representing both employers and employees, spanning matters from compensation agreements and severance packages through to constructive dismissals.

Daniel Lublin, the firm's co-founding partner, was also recognized this year, with researchers pointing to his skill as a litigator for both employers and employees, particularly in human rights and discrimination matters, alongside his work on employment agreements, wrongful dismissals, and severance.
“Being recognized by Chambers year after year reflects the depth of experience we bring to every case, on both the employer and employee side” said Daniel Lublin, Founding Partner.
