Jeteye today announced the launch of its business aviation intelligence and software platform, bringing together a growing collection of free and paid tools designed specifically for business aviation, with continuous product development planned.

Business aviation has no shortage of information. The problem is that much of it is fragmented across regulatory databases, aircraft records, operator websites, spreadsheets and legacy software platforms.

We're excited to bring Jeteye to market with a purposeful suite of products. Users can create a free account, explore the platform and begin using many of its tools at no cost.”

David Hartmann

Jeteye brings those pieces together and turns fragmented aviation data into information people can understand, act on and turn into opportunity.

The result is not one large software system. It is a growing ecosystem of focused products. Many are available free of charge, while paid products are designed to help customers generate revenue, identify opportunities, save time and reduce costs well beyond the price of the subscription.

Built for Business Aviation.

Backed by Serious Development Horsepower.

Jeteye is powered by The SilverLogic, a Boca Raton-based software development company that has spent more than a decade building and supporting sophisticated digital platforms. That gives Jeteye something uncommon for a new aviation technology company: substantial development horsepower from day one. The SilverLogic provides the technical infrastructure, product development resources and long-term support behind the platform, with experience spanning custom software, SaaS platforms, artificial intelligence, aviation automation, UX/UI and enterprise applications.

“We’ve spent considerable time studying the business aviation sector and identifying where better technology, better information and more intuitive tools can make a meaningful difference,” said David Hartmann, CEO of Jeteye & The SilverLogic. “We’re excited to bring Jeteye to market with a purposeful suite of products built around those opportunities. Many of Jeteye’s tools and resources will remain free for registered users because we believe useful technology and information should be accessible to the broader business aviation community. We encourage people to try the platform, give us feedback and tell us what they want to see next. Continuous improvement is part of the roadmap, and we’re just getting started.”

What We’re Building

Jeteye’s growing product ecosystem turns aviation data into practical tools that help operators, brokers and sales teams understand more, move faster and identify opportunities. Explore Jeteye at Jeteye.io.

Screeners help users verify operators and instantly understand their fleet makeup, average aircraft age, additions and reductions, growth trends and hundreds of other data points. With data updated daily, fragmented aviation information becomes actionable intelligence.

Dynamic Fleet helps operators and brokers beautifully visualize and showcase their fleet and scale. Display managed, private and partner aircraft in a fully editable fleet experience that can live directly on your website or be shared through a dedicated URL.

TripScope is an interactive, fully customizable instant-quote and lead-generation tool that works 24/7 on your website, helping capture charter demand while customers explore trips and aircraft options.

Budget Builder creates professional, branded aircraft budgets in minutes across three modes of aircraft operation and a database of roughly 300 aircraft. Users can explore charter breakeven, fixed and variable costs, utilization and other aircraft economics, then turn the results into an easy-to-understand presentation, PDF or shareable URL.

From Data to Opportunity. Jeteye is live. Users can create a free account, explore the platform and begin using many of its tools at no cost.
