growing brands, Vox has expanded its strategic reserve to hold over $15 million in finished goods in stock, on hand, and ready to ship, establishing the company as an industry leader in immediate market delivery.

In an industry where supplement brands frequently face 8-to-12-week manufacturing delays, Vox Nutrition has redefined speed-to-market.

"In the fast-moving dietary supplement space, out-of-stock means lost revenue and diminished customer loyalty," said Mark Bible, COO at Vox Nutrition. "We built our operational model to eliminate supply chain anxiety for our partners. Maintaining $15 million in ready-to-ship inventory allows our clients to capitalize on viral demand and scale without waiting weeks for production runs."

Key Highlights of Vox Nutrition's Operational Advantage:

- Immediate Stock Availability: Over $15,000,000 in finished goods staged across top-selling categories, including sports nutrition, weight management, daily vitamins, hair and beauty, and targeted specialty health.
- High-Volume Storage: More than 200 million capsules stored in cGMP-compliant warehousing ready for dispatch.

- Rapid Turnaround Times: Standard lead times reduced to 2 weeks for in-stock, private label, bottled capsules, ready for instant label application.
- On-Demand Scalability: Direct-to-brand and fulfillment-ready capabilities engineered to prevent stockouts during high-demand marketing pushes.

Vox Nutrition continues to expand its high-speed encapsulation, automated packaging, and in-house fulfillment capabilities out of its state-of-the-art West Jordan Utah facility to support both startups and enterprise supplement brands.
