

Dsparada Expands Its Color Services With Custom Gray Coverage Technique

Dsparada Color Salon is a hair color salon offering a range of services include color, highlighting, balayage, corrective color and gray coverage treatments.

RALEIGH, NC, UNITED STATES, October 8, 2026

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Dsparada Color Salon has announced the addition of a new custom gray coverage technique to its existing menu of hair color services. The technique is designed for clients seeking a more tailored approach to managing gray hair, rather than a standardized treatment applied uniformly across all clients.

It relies on individualized formulation based on each client's hair characteristics, including texture, porosity and the distribution of gray strands. The addition reflects a broader effort within the salon to expand its color service offerings to accommodate a wider range of client needs related to gray coverage.

Growing Client Demand Shapes Expansion of Color Services

Hair coloring clients increasingly request services tailored to their individual hair. This includes texture, growth pattern and degree of graying. Many clients now prefer this over uniform, one-size treatments. Salons across the industry have responded to this shift. They are developing techniques that combine traditional coverage methods with more individualized formulation.

This expansion into custom gray coverage reflects that broader movement. It is part of a wider trend toward personalized color services in the salon industry. The technique is intended for clients seeking options based on their own hair profile. This includes hair type, percentage of gray, and growth pattern. It also accounts for a client's preferred maintenance schedule. The approach differs from a single standardized formula applied to every client.

Details of the Custom Gray Coverage Technique

The technique begins with an assessment of the client's hair. Colorists evaluate the distribution and percentage of gray strands. They also assess hair texture, porosity and overall condition. Based on this assessment, a custom color blend is formulated. The formulation accounts for the client's natural base color. It also considers growth pattern and desired outcome.

The process allows adjustments to formulation based on individual needs. This distinguishes it from standardized gray-coverage methods. Those methods typically apply one formula regardless of hair characteristics.

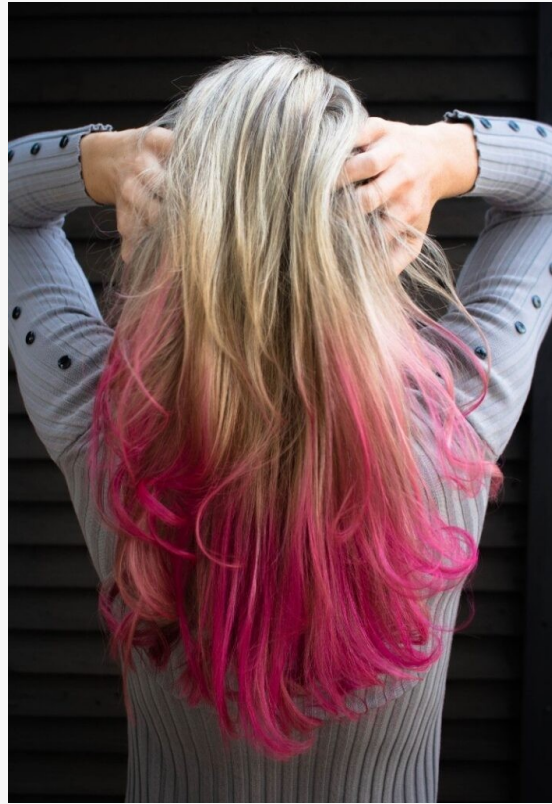

The individualized approach is intended to support more consistent results between appointments. Formulation can be adjusted over time as needed. This includes changes based on how hair responds to treatment. It also reflects shifts in a client's gray growth pattern.

The custom gray coverage service can be booked as a standalone appointment. It can also be combined with other color services. This includes highlighting or single-process color, depending on a client's goals.

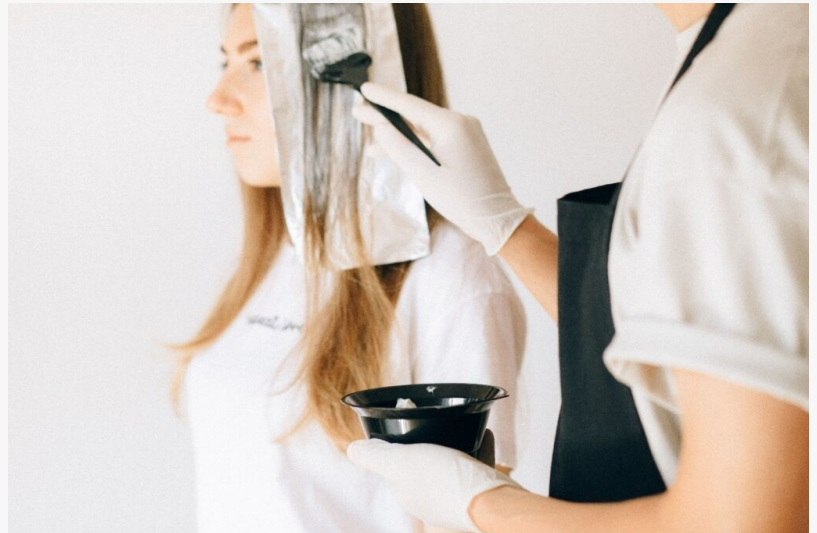

Positioning Within the Salon's Broader Service Menu

The salon offers a range of hair color services. These include single-process color, highlighting, balayage and corrective color treatments. The new custom gray coverage technique adds to this existing menu.

It is designed to expand the salon's ability to serve clients focused on gray coverage. The service maintains consistency with the salon's existing color standards and formulation practices.

corrective color

Staff colorists perform the custom gray coverage technique. They use formulation and application methods developed specifically for this service. Appointment length and pricing vary by client. Factors include hair length, hair coloring needs, and the extent of gray coverage required. These details are determined during a consultation before the appointment.

Consultation and Appointment Process

Clients interested in the service are scheduled for an initial consultation. During this consultation, a colorist evaluates hair type and gray distribution. Texture and desired outcome are also assessed. This helps determine a formulation approach specific to that client. The consultation step informs the formulation process used later. It is not a predetermined formula applied without individual assessment.

Appointment scheduling and additional details can be obtained directly from the salon. This includes pricing, expected appointment duration, and availability. Clients switching from a previous gray coverage method may also request a consultation. This allows them to discuss how the custom technique differs from prior treatments.

Broader Trends in Personalized Hair Color Services

The introduction of individualized gray coverage techniques reflects a wider industry trend. Salons increasingly favor formulation processes tailored to individual client characteristics. This marks a shift away from standardized treatments applied without variation.

Industry observers have noted sustained interest in personalized beauty services. This includes hair color services tailored to specific hair type and texture. Clients increasingly seek treatments suited to their individual coloring goals.

This service expansion fits within that broader movement. It reflects a shift toward customized service delivery in the hair color segment. Salons continue to adapt existing techniques for more individualized options. This includes options for clients managing gray hair at different stages. It also accounts for varying growth patterns among clients.
