FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

UNITED STATES — Filmmaker Dr. David J. Hoffman, founder of TrenDee Productions, LLC, has announced the upcoming release of his third AI-generated feature film, ADAM and EVE: Apple of His Eye, continuing an ambitious slate of faith-centered biblical films featuring Black principal casts.

The new biblical epic is scheduled to arrive on streaming platforms November 15, 2026. According to TDP Studios, the film follows Adam and Eve from the beauty of Eden through the consequences of their defining choice, extending the story into life beyond the garden and the account of Cain and Abel.

Written and directed by Hoffman, ADAM and EVE: Apple of His Eye marks the latest release in a growing body of Christian filmmaking that combines biblical storytelling with emerging artificial intelligence production technology.

ADAM and EVE: Apple of His Eye

Hoffman previously created MOSES: Born of Water and Fire and JOSEPH: A Feared Master from Birth, establishing a developing catalogue of AI-assisted Bible epics through TrenDee Productions. TDP Studios identifies Hoffman as a filmmaker, director, writer and acting coach whose work centers on themes including Christian faith, family, justice and redemption.

With ADAM and EVE: Apple of His Eye, Hoffman is continuing a much larger creative mission. The filmmaker says he is currently developing a catalogue of 127 Bible-based AI feature films with Black principal casts. Three films have now been completed, leaving 124 projects planned as part of the broader slate.

That scope makes the latest release more than a standalone film announcement. It represents another step in Hoffman's effort to build a substantial collection of faith-based cinematic stories while exploring how artificial intelligence can expand the possibilities available to independent filmmakers.

Through TrenDee Productions, LLC, also known as TDP Studios, Hoffman is building that catalogue around recognizable biblical narratives while presenting them through a distinctive visual and cultural lens.

The company's current film library includes Moses: Born of Water and Fire, Joseph: A Feared Master from Birth, and now ADAM and EVE: Apple of His Eye. TDP Studios describes its mission as creating Christian films and original animation designed to entertain, inspire and make a positive difference.

For Hoffman, the use of AI filmmaking technology is not intended to replace storytelling. Instead, it has become part of the production process that allows him to develop larger-scale cinematic concepts independently while maintaining control over the stories he wants to tell.

ADAM and EVE: Apple of His Eye centers on one of Scripture's most recognizable accounts: humanity's beginnings in the Garden of Eden.

The film explores Adam and Eve's relationship, temptation, rebellion and the consequences of their decision, while continuing beyond their departure from Eden into family life and the story of Cain and Abel. TDP Studios describes the film as a drama centered on "love, temptation, and the consequences of rebellion."

The project also continues Hoffman's commitment to Black representation in biblical filmmaking.

His growing catalogue places Black principal characters at the center of large-scale biblical stories, creating a body of work intended to combine Christian themes, dramatic storytelling and representation in a format that is still developing within the independent film industry.

As artificial intelligence becomes increasingly visible throughout entertainment and media production, Hoffman is positioning TrenDee Productions at the intersection of Christian filmmaking, independent film and AI-assisted cinema.

His pace of production also reflects a long-term vision rather than a one-film experiment. With three completed titles and more than 100 additional biblical projects planned, Hoffman says there are “no signs of slowing down.”

The release of ADAM and EVE: Apple of His Eye gives audiences another look at how that vision is evolving.
