The combination brings together Eutecma's reusable, larger-format shipping systems with TempAid's portfolio of thermal packaging for parcel and last-mile delivery. The combined company will offer reusable and single-use solutions ranging from individual mailers to bulk pallet shippers, with operations across Europe, North America and Asia.

Health Business Group conducted commercial due diligence on TempAid. The work assessed TempAid's market position, customer relationships and product portfolio, and its fit with Eutecma's business in the context of the global pharmaceutical cold chain.

The acquisition follows GPP's 2025 investment in Eutecma, on which Health Business Group also advised.

"Health Business Group brought a strong understanding of the cold chain packaging space to this work," said Eddie Hjerpe, Principal at Great Point Partners. "Their rigorous approach to primary and secondary research, and their ability to synthesize it into clear insights, made them a valuable partner on the TempAid investment."

"TempAid has built a strong position in an attractive market for temperature-controlled packaging," said David E. Williams, President of Health Business Group. "Together, Eutecma and TempAid provide customers with one source for reusable and single-use solutions that cover the full journey, from pallet to parcel."
