The award was presented on October 8, 2026, during the Denver Business Journal's annual Partners in Philanthropy celebration, which recognizes businesses and nonprofit organizations making a meaningful difference throughout the Denver community.

For Kind Home Painting, giving back has always been a fundamental part of its mission to beautify and improve lives.

Through its Community Outreach Program, the company empowers employees to volunteer, supports local nonprofit organizations, and provides painting services to individuals and families in need.

$80,000 in charitable giving and donated painting services to support the Colorado community.

"Giving back has always been about more than writing a check or volunteering a few hours," said Michael Sutton, Owner and Founder of Kind Home Painting. "We believe businesses have a responsibility to make their communities better, and we're fortunate to have a team that genuinely cares about making a difference. This recognition is a reflection of our incredible employees and the nonprofit partners who inspire us to do more every year."

One of the company's most impactful initiatives is its annual Painting with Kindness Program, which provides complimentary exterior painting services to deserving homeowners, community heroes, and individuals facing challenging circumstances.

In 2025, Kind Home Painting donated more than $45,000 in painting services to transform six homes across the Denver metro area. The program recognizes individuals who are experiencing hardship or have dedicated their lives to helping others, including teachers, veterans, first responders, nonprofit leaders, and community volunteers.
