Inspired by a true event, Ek Onkar: One God explores the devastating consequences of hatred and prejudice while examining the enduring power of faith, humanity, compassion, and unity.

The story follows a man consumed by rage who enters a Sikh temple and takes the lives of innocent worshippers. In the aftermath of the tragedy, a community is left to confront profound grief while searching for the courage to heal, rebuild, and find hope.

More than a story about violence, Ek Onkar: One God is a deeply human examination of what can happen when hatred is allowed to grow—and how faith, compassion, and unity can help people rise above even the darkest moments.

The title, Ek Onkar, reflects the foundational Sikh belief in one universal Creator and the spiritual understanding that humanity is interconnected. Through this message, the film encourages audiences to look beyond differences and recognize the dignity, equality, and humanity within every person.

Written and directed by Kavi Raz, Ek Onkar: One God continues the filmmaker's commitment to telling meaningful stories that confront difficult social realities while encouraging dialogue, understanding, and compassion.

"Hatred may divide people, but the belief in one humanity has the power to bring us together," said Raz. “This film is a reminder that faith should inspire compassion, courage, and respect for every human life.”

Ek Onkar: One God will be released in theaters worldwide on November 13, 2026.
