“

The Coconut Grove show is a chance to connect with fellow collectors, share our passion for exceptional watches, and help people discover a timepiece they'll enjoy for years.”

Matthew Bain

The Coconut Grove Jewelry & Watch Show brings together dealers from around the world presenting antique, vintage, and estate jewelry and timepieces. For South Florida watch enthusiasts, the event offers an opportunity to explore different eras of design, discover collectible pieces, and speak directly with specialists about the details that distinguish individual watches.

Matthew Bain Inc.'s participation brings decades of watch-trade experience to the event. Founder Matthew Bain has been buying and selling timepieces professionally since 1989. Today, he and partner and managing director Morgan Cardet serve collectors and luxury retailers from the company's Coral Gables office.

The company's collection spans vintage and modern watches from brands including Rolex, Patek Philippe, Cartier, Audemars Piguet, and Omega. Its approach emphasizes personalized service and an appreciation for the history, design, and craftsmanship behind each timepiece.

An Opportunity to Connect With Watch Specialists

Visitors are invited to meet the Matthew Bain Inc. team and discuss their collecting interests, whether they are exploring their first vintage watch, searching for a particular reference, or considering selling a piece from an existing collection.

An in-person conversation can help collectors better understand the characteristics they value in a watch, from case proportions and dial design to condition and historical significance. Attendees interested in a specific model or reference are encouraged to contact Matthew Bain Inc. before the event to discuss their interests and arrange a meeting.

The company also welcomes inquiries from owners considering selling individual watches or collections. Its website provides information about the selling process and a way to contact the team ahead of the show.
