

MyTi Films Sets November 20 Premiere for Medusa on Its Free AI-Generated Streaming Platform

New Jersey-based venture plans eight original AI-generated titles over eight months; free members get premiere access one week early

MONROE TWP, NJ, UNITED STATES, October 23, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- MyTi Films, an independently operated streaming platform for original AI-generated series and films, will premiere Medusa on November 20, 2026. Viewers who join the platform's free membership will be able to watch the series one week earlier, on November 13.

The Medusa premiere marks the first title in MyTi Films' planned slate of eight titles released over eight months. The lineup spans reimagined Greek legends, detective thrillers, and Hindi-language stories inspired by ancient tales. The platform launched in October 2026 and is available at <https://MyTiFilms.com>

MyTi Films is building its catalog around an exclusive license to adapt the River Comics universe, a comic-book library containing more than 30 original titles. The company's approach brings together AI-assisted production, its own streaming destination, and a licensed library of stories for future adaptation.

"AI didn't just lower the cost of making films, it broke the assumption that you need a studio to run a slate. We're building a platform around a pipeline of stories and giving viewers a place to watch the work," said Jai Thakar, producer of MyTi Films.

MyTi Films says it labels its AI-generated content on posters and films, making transparency a visible part of the brand. The company aims to give AI-curious viewers and fans of science fiction, fantasy, thrillers, mythology, and international storytelling a single destination for full-length AI-generated entertainment.

The platform is free to watch. Free members receive early access to each premiere seven days before its public release. Following Medusa, the next announced title is Master Holmes, scheduled for December 20, 2026.
