BELLEVUE, WA, UNITED STATES, October 27, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Agent Review announced a partnership with WebCE that will give subscribers a convenient path to insurance continuing education services through the Agent Review agency portal. The addition builds on Agent Review's longstanding partnership with Rhoads, which supports monthly monitoring of agent licensing status. Through an API connection, Rhoads supplies licensing data that Agent Review can use to identify approaching license renewal deadlines. Education information from WebCE can support continuing education alerts and give subscribers a direct path from the portal to relevant WebCE resources.

For an agent managing licenses across multiple states, that sequence matters: see what needs attention, find appropriate training, and act before a deadline is missed. WebCE offers insurance education for life and health, property and casualty, limited lines and adjusting professionals. Agents complete courses through WebCE and remain responsible for satisfying each state's requirements and filing their renewals. "Agents should not have to piece together their professional obligations from disconnected systems," said Jonas Roeser, CEO and Co-Founder of Agent Review. "Rhoads helps us keep track of changes in an agent's professional record. Connecting subscribers to WebCE gives them a practical next step when continuing education needs attention."

The service is part of Agent Review's broader work to help insurance professionals build a credible presence in an increasingly digital marketplace. Consumers can use the platform to learn about insurance, search for professionals, and rate and review their experiences. Agents can maintain public profiles supported by client reviews, AI video identity verification and monthly monitoring of available professional information. As consumers increasingly use AI tools to research insurance professionals, a current and consistent record matters. Agent Review is bringing verification, visibility and business resources together so agents can manage their obligations while giving consumers more information to assess.
